GLORIOUS NEWS FROM GEORGIA SHERMAN PURSUING HIS COURSE TRIUMPHANTLY.

RICHMOND PAPERS OF YESTERDAY ADMIT THAT HE HAS CROSSED THE COONEE RIVER.

The following important despatches have been received at the War Department:

CITY POINT, VA., December 1st, 1864

Hon. Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War The Richmond Examiner of to-day admits that Sherman will succeed in reaching the sea coast. Other papers admit that he has crossed

U. S. GRANT, Lt. Gen'l. IMPORTANT RECONNOISSANCE BY GEN. GREGG SOUTH OF PETERSBURG!

HE CAPTURES STONEY CREEK STATION.

ALSO CAPTURES TWO PIECES OF ARTILLE RY. 190 PRISONERS, AND A LARGE AMOUNT OF SUPPLIES.

HE ASCERTAINS THAT LEE HAS SENT NO TROOPS SOUTHWARD AGAINST SHERMAN

CITY POINT, VA., Dec. 1.-Gregg's cavalry was sent south this morning on a reconnoissance more particularly to discover if the enemy were moving troops south. The following dispatch is just received in relation to it. "HEADQUARTERS ARMY POTOMAC, Dec. 1st, 1861, 8 p. m .- To Lieutenant General Grant: I have just heard from Gen. Gregg. His dispatch is dated 3.45 p.m. He reports having captured Stony Creek Station which was defended by intantry and cavalry in works with artillery. He captured two pieces of artillery but had no means of bringing them off so spiked them and destroyed the carriages. He had one hundred and ninety prisoners, eight wagons and thirty mules, burnt the depot with three thousand sacks of corn' Mye hundred bales of hay, a train of cars, large amount of bacon, clothing, ammunition and other Government stores. Destroyed all the shops and public buildings.

The 2d brigade, Col. Gregg commanding, had the advance, and is reported as most gallantly carrying the enemy's position.

Jen. Gregg is now returning to camp. No information could be obtained of the passing of any troops southward, either cavalry or in fantry. The bed of the Branch road from Stony Creek was seen graded, but no rails were laid.

At Duval Station, south of Stony Creek, much property was destroyed, and a large amount of railroad iron found, which an effort was made to destroy by burning. When the staff officer who brought the dispatch left, the enemy were showing signs of having concentrated, and were following, but he thinks General Greeg will be in camp by midnight. GEO. G. MEADE, Maj Gen.

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF SCHO. FIELD'S BRILLIANT VICTORY OVER HOOD!

A HEAVY FIGHT ANTICIPATED THERE

[Special Despatch to The Star.]

NASHVILLE, TENN., Dec. 1, 1864, 7 p. m .-Attack at Franklin last night was a severe battle, the enemy acting with all his forces, and suffering heavily in killed, wounded and prisoners. Of the latter 1,000 have been brought in, and the the former is estimated at not less than 3,000; while our entire list of casualties will not reach 1,000. After caring for our part we fell back, leaving Franklin at 3 a. m., and now confront Hood from the fortifications of Nashville. Gen. Steadman has arrived with part of his troops. Our cavalry, under Wilson gave Forrest a good fight on the Hillsboro road, and came in all right. Rebel infantry appeared on our front at 4.30 p.m. Things look like work here to-morrow.

IMPORTANT FROM PORT ROYAL. A Movement going on from that Point-Heavy Firing heard in that Vicinity on

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.- The steamer Melville from Port Royal on the 27th ult, has arrived. On the 26th General Foster issued orders for all citizens to be enrolled, and report for duty on the 27th. They were to be formed in companies for home protection. The United States forces there were to move immediately-destination unknown.

The Melville also reports that after leaving the port, at about six p. m., she heard heavy and quick firing at Port Royal, but could not tell the meaning of it.

INTERESTING FROM LATE RICH. MOND PAPERS.

They Admit that Sherman may "Reach the Sea in Safety"-The Importance of Augusta and Macon Confessed-Jeff Davis Abused for Sending Hood to "a Remote Corner of Tennessee" Leaving the Road Clear for Sherman-The Rebels Fear that Sherman Aims to Reach Beaufort with the idea of Operating upon Charleston and Savannah and Joining Grant.

The extracts we give below from late Rich' mond papers are interesting as showing that the rebels at Richmond are by no means so sanguine of hindering Sherman in his progress enrough Georgia, as the organs of Jeff Davis would have them believe. The Richmond Examiner of Nov. 28th, says: "He may reach the sea in safety, and by so doing inflict disappointment on the country and disgrace on the official persons who should have rendered his escape impossible in that direction, or in any direction, after he burned Atlanta and "busted the railroad." But let us suppose the worst. Let us suppose that he takes one or the other of those towns. He will inflict some loss on the citizens and some on the government; but he cannot stay there, as he could have stayed at Atlanta, for he would have no supply or communication. Still less will he be able to leave a garrison; for that would be delivering the men who should compose it prisoners into our hands. He can do absolutely nothing after destroying a certain number of buildings but continue his march to

If he should reach the coast what would be the consequence! The country from Chatta-nooga to Savannah would be then clear of all enemy, and, except the moral effect, and the blunders which panics never fail to breed, we profess ourselves unable to see the mighty re-sults which will have been obtained. If the fear of this flying column, and the political influences which the outcries of a population not hardened by the contact of war may bring to bear on military councils, should cause the Confederate generals to disorganize their ar-mies and abandon their plans, its effects will indeed be great and disastrous to us. But if no such panic is created and no such blunders are made-if no time is lost in locking the doors of stables, from which the steeds were all stolen when Johnston was taken away from his army, and Davis, under the name of Hood, assumed command of it-this march-we speak of the progress through the land alode-will have no more real significance in the history of the war than the feats of tightrope walkers on the destinies of empires. That one part of Sherman's design was the production of this moral effect-to rejoice the sovereign mob of the United States, and to frighten into fits all the fools in the Confederthe Confederacy never was a part of his design, because that was plainly impossible. Beyond the moral effects, he had undoubtedly greataim. The extraordinary disappearance of the only army opposed to him in front of Atlanta, and its disposition in a remote corner of Tennessee, left him nothing to do in the interior of the country, except perhaps to occupy it and garrison towns. This he was in no condition to attempt, for his army was diminished to half its number after the fall of Atlanta It was organized for three years in 1861, and the enlistment of most regiments expired in June. He kept them together for seme time by the promise that they would be sent home as soon s the town was taken.

When the Jonesboro' movement proved a Federal success-a disgrace to our arms not less indelible than Missionary Ridge-he kept his promise, and his army was reduced to what it is now. It was insufficient to garrison and occupy a wide extent of country; but it might be used against Charleston or Savannab, or at least it might be employed, after a junction with Grant, against Richmond. Now, the nearest way to Richmond, to Charleston or Savannah is precisely the road he has taken. By a direct march to Beaufort be reaches the fleet, which can land him, without obstacle or danger, on the bank of the James. In any event, work for his army could only be found by directing his steps to the sea. His blows are not aimed at inland villages, nor is the object of his march the separation of the Confed. eracy, or of those railroads which unite more rapidly than he can cut the m.

The Importance of Macon and Augusta Urged-By Taking Either Sherman will Accomplish Great Things. From the Richmond Examiner, Nov. 26.1 The news from Georgia, now the most interesting of all, is exceedingly meagre and untrustworthy. But no doubt can now be entertained of Sherman's design or his destination When Davis sent, and Hood took, the only army apparent in the country off his shoulders and carried it through the mountains to stick in the mud between Tuscumbia and Florence, Sherman determined to make an attempt on the lines of communication between Virginia, the Carolinians and the rest of the Confederate States, his work in Northern Georgia was done, and for ulterlor operations any point on the seacoast would be a better base than Chattanooga. He risked much in appearance, but perhaps little in reality, by destroying his communications. A marching army can transport ammunition for at least three pitched battles, and for supplies this of the year he might partly rely on the country which he proposed to pass. If he could take Macon or Augusta by the way, he would accomplish great things; but the destruction of those towns are not his main object. His design was to destroy the railroads, as far as he could, which ran from Southern and Western Georgia to Virginia and the Carolinas, and to rest his army at Beaufort and Port Royal. That he would go to that point rather than Savannah is nearly certain for certain for if he directed his course to Savannah or Charlston, he would find fortified and well defended cities, and his troops, exhausted by a long march, both in strength and ammunition, would be wholly unfit to reduce either place. But the enemy already has possession f Beaufort. He would have no fighting to do there, and he would find transports laden with every species of supply awaiting his arrival. It is, therefore, reasonable to believe that Beaufort is the point of destination, and that if he fails at Augusta he will make his way thither as fast as the Confederate troops permit him. If the reader will glance at the map, he will perceive that when Sherman has passed from Chattanooga to Atlanta, and thence to Beaufort, he will have severed every railroad be-tween Georgia and Virginia. This severance will be easily repaired; but if he can establish himself permanently at Beautort, he may be able to operate against those roads repeatedly. Furthermore, Beaufort lies between Charleston and Savannah, and can be conveniently used as the base of land operations against either city. It is evidently highly important that Sherman should never take Augusta or Macon, and should never reach Beaufort.

The Great Battle at Franklin, Tennessee.

Hood Attacks Gen. Schofield-He is Repulsed with Terrible Loss-600 Rebels Killed and Wounded-100 Prisoners Arrived at Nashville-Two Rebel Generals Taken-Impetuosity of the Rebel Attack -Hood Commands in Person-Great Gallantry of Our Troops-Union Loss 700 Killed and Wounded-Our Army Concentrated at Nashville-Arrival of Gen. A. J. Smith's Corps-Panic Among the Citizens, White and Black-Nashville full of Refugees.

[Despatch to the Phila. Irquirer.] NASHVILLE, Dec. 1 .- The great battle at Franklin, fought on Wednesday, began by preliminary encounters at positions in advance of that position three previous days. Our army fell back, during that period, severely pressed by Cheatham's and Stuart's corps, and took a position in improvised works in front of the town of Franklin

Skirmishing began about neon, and at four o. m. developed into the full proportions of a For two hours subsequent to that time the ontest raged with most desperate fury. The enemy's attack was directed chiefly against our center, and aimed to pierce that portion of our line. In this design he was unnappily so far successful that the left center, under command of General Wagner, gave way. This for a time created great confusion, but after some effort the troops were rallied, and the integrity of the line of battle restored. This being accomplished, a vigorous counter charge on the enemy was made, and the rebel front was forced back in confusion. We captured five hundred prisoners and a rebel division commander, General Gordon.

While this advance was being made on our part, the enemy attempted a counter maneuver, with the view of turning our right flank. In this design he failed, and the tactical victory remained with the Union army. The brunt of he battle fell upon our right and center, and was only closed by the mantle of night falling npon the combatants.

Hood commanded in person, and the assaults were marked by his characteristic impetuosity After dark made persistent efforts to drive the Union army across Harpeth river, but our men stood their ground, and held the works until two this morning, when the whole army was transferred across the river and Franklin evacuated, the enemy making demonstrations on our rear with their cavalry. Our loss in killed and wounded is about one thousand, but of the enemy must reach at least five times that number, the disparity being due to the fact that our troops fought under cover of breastworks. The experience of to-day's battle demonstrates that Hood has with him a very formidable army, and he brought into play not less than fifty pieces of artillery. Our whole army is now concentrated in Nashville, the strategic point which forms the object of the next attack by Hood, and which is hourly expected. Our wounded have all been lodged in cospitals in this city, and our dead were properly cared for during the night.

While, as previously reported, all present ndications go to show that Hood will lavish his most energetic efforts in an attempt to capture this point, yet if he concludes it imprudent to risk the attempt, his object will probably be to turn his line of advance towards Knoxville, where he would be in position either to make further advances via Cumberland (lap, or, if necessary, to effect a junction with Lee, via Lynchburg. It is not contraband for me to add, for the encouragement of the country, that the defenses of Nashville are the result of two years' labor and engineering skill, and he will find an attempt at its eapture a much more difficult task than le had before him at Franklin. I firmly believe that our impregnable lines will set a or rier to his further progress north ward. NA: "VILLE, Dec. 1.-Hood's infantry force few males south of Nashville, and is able to resistany force the Rebels may bring against The Confederate General captured vesterday, was Coionel Gordon, of the 11th Tennessee, brevet Brigadier General.

An officer who witnessed the fight at Franklin vest rday describes the battle as one of the most sanguinary of the war. The determined bravery of the Rebels exceeded anything before Although slaughtered by hundreds, they still advanced against our batteries, and within five hours eieven distinct assaults were made against our works, each of which were a fail-The battle being ended, our forces quietly withdrew from the town. The following are among the casualties:

Major General Stanley, wounded by a shot in the neck. The Repel General Cheatham is reported wounded. Killed - Captain Bissell. 128th Indiana: Captain Staley, 124th Indiana; Major —, 124th Indiana; Capt. Hinton, 124th Indiana, mortally wounded; Colonel Surrey, 107th Illinois; Captain Coughton, of General Cox's staff.

Wounded-Col. Watkins, 3d brigade, 1st division, in shoulder; Capt. Bowling, 111th Ohio; Col. Conrad, in command of a brigade of the 2d division. Among the rebel casualties are Brig. Gen.

Adams, killed, and Brig. Gen. Scott, wounded. The total loss of the enemy in killed, wounded and prisoners is estimated at 4,000, 3,000 being either killed or wounded. The Federal loss in killed and wounded is 700. The loss in prisoners is trifling; our loss in regiments is light. Gen. Bradley is also wounded and in the city. Col. Stockton and Maj. James, of the 72d Illino's, are also wounded. It is rumored this evening that Hood is moving enetward toward Murfreesboro.

AFFAIRS IN BALTIMORE .- On Thursday night several political prisoners, confined in the military prison attached to the headquarters of Colonel Woolley, attempted to escape by digging a tunnel under the foundation of one of the buildings. Their operations were heard by the guard, and if any of the prisoners had placed their heads above ground, a bullet would most assuredly have sealed their fate, as the guards have orders to shoot any person attempting to escape from the prison. Horatio Griffith, Ri hard Dorsey of Caleb, S: muel O Dorsey, Dr. B. B. Crawford, F. M. Price, and Samuel Ryar, residents of Howard and Montgomery counties, were sent to the headquarters of Colonel Woolley, yesterday, by General Tyler, charged with having been engaged in recruiting soldiers for the rebel army and committing other acts of a treasona. ble character. They are held for trial .- Balto.

AFFAIRS IN DORCHESTER COUNTY .- The following we take from the Cambridge, Md., Her-Contested Seat .- Dr. T. K. Carroll, who was defeated at the last election in this county, for State Senator, by Mr. Holland, intends contesting his seat, on the grounds of illegal votes being cast at the several polls in the county. Mr. H. informed us on Monday last that Gov.

Bradford had not accepted his resignation up to that date. Senator Hicks .- We regret to state that Senator Hicks is still somewhat debilitated. He rides out though, occasionally, in pleasant weather. He will probably go on to Washington in time to take his seat in the United States Senate at its commencement. FIGHT AMONG THE FANCY FRMALES .- Last night a very lively little fight occurred in the house on D and 13th streets, formerly occupied by Maggie Murphy. The parties engaged were Maggie Murphy, Ida Forbes and Eliza-beth Gallagher. They were all arrested by Officer Watts and taken before Justice Boswell. The witnesses testified that Maggie Murphy and Ida Forbes went to the house for a fight, got one, and the parties fought hard, and were well marked with bruises and scratches. The Justice fined each $5.94, and held all to bailfo beace.

The decline in gold reported yesterday, and the depression in other markets have favored buyers here.
